

Paradise Island Times

Even animals need a vacation!

Breaking News By: Ara

This week, we are doing something different: A vacation issue! We're going to the beach, however, there are still problems on the beach.

The jellyfish are in a fight with the sea urchins. The comic strip will show you what happened, so please don't go in the water. If you do you, you'll get stung or poked! But don't worry, you can still take a nice long nap in the sun on the warm sand. There is also a pool and a hot-tub at this Paradise Island beach. If you want a delicious dinner tonight, visit Lobster House for a fantastic 5-star dinner.

Fact of the day: Dolphins use echolocation, which is also called sonar.

1

JELLYFISH DRAMA

Watch out for the Jellyfish!

2

HIGH TIDE UPDATE

Foxes on surfboards!
What could go wrong?

3

BEACH STORIES AND ILLUSTRATIONS

Everyone needs a vacation some time!

Beach Weather
by Ella

Hurry to get away from the hurricane.

On next Monday morning, a Class 5 hurricane will hit Paradise Island.

All the sea and land animals will be in big trouble.

On the news, a few weeks ago, Hurricane Irma hit Florida and devastated thousands of animals and people.

We are still raising money to rebuild houses and apartment buildings.

Jellyfish Drama

By: Ara

High Tide Update

BY: Caiden Illustration by: Ara

Thursday, November 2nd, at 3:03 am, foxes are surfing at Paradise Island on Driftwood Way. It was high, tide and the waves were as big as a school bus. One fox fell and stepped on a sea urchin. A huge wave came, and one fox went upside down into the water, and got sprayed with ink by a squid. The last fox got pushed onto the sand and pinched by a crab.

The Sharks and the Thieves

By: Serenity & Ara

“Oh no!” said the sharks. “I don’t know where our stuff went! Where are our water bottles and toys?”

“I think I know who is behind this,” said one shark. “It is the crabs!”

Dun...dun...duuuuuunnnnnn!

The crabs did it because they were thieves. They were trying to make money.

“How are we going to get our stuff back?” asked one shark.

“How about we say we’ll take their stuff if they don’t give our water bottles and toys back?” said another shark.

“Yeah!” said all the sharks.

Right after the conversation, the crabs surrendered and the sharks got all their stuff back. The end.

Water Sports

By: Cole

On November 8th, on Paradise Island, the sharks and the dolphins were playing water volleyball. The sharks won because they were bigger and stronger, and they hit the ball farther.

Illustration by: Cole (Sports and Brooke’s story.)

A Crabby Situation

By Brooklynn

One day, a crab was in the water. The crab was annoyed by the sea urchins.

The crab said, “Ouch, ouch, ouch!”

The sea urchins were stinging the crab. Now the dolphin was getting annoyed by the crab because the crab was saying, “Ouch, ouch, ouch.”

Then, the dolphin had an idea, “Who wants to play ball?”

Sandy Paws

By: Emma

One day, in early morning, my mom announced that we were going to Paradise Island.

I jumped out of my seat, since I was eating breakfast. “Yes, yes, yes!” I cried, since I love the beach.

I quickly finished breakfast and packed my swimsuit and other items I would need for the trips.

Finally, my family and I were ready to go to Paradise Island. I bounced up and down on my toes waiting for my brother, Kole, to tie his shoes.

“Come on already! I want to go to the beach!” I cried.

“Jeeze,” my brother said, rolling his eyes. “I’ve only been tying my shoes for a second. When will you learn patience?” asked my brother with annoyance.

“I’ll learn patience with me,” I retorted. My brother glared at me. I mumbled and walked past my brother, bumping into him- purposefully- for effect. I picked up my beach bag and skipped back to the car with a smirk on my face. I loaded my bag in the trunk and buckled up.

Not long after, my parents and brother got into the car. My dad started the car, and we set off. Finally, we got to Paradise Island where we unloaded and set up our canopy and set down our towels. I began playing with Pepper in the water.

Suddenly, a giant wave crashed down on top of me for I had gone out too far. I popped back out of the water, gasping for air, the tangy flavor of salt still in my mouth. I coughed and choked until I was finally able to breathe steadier.

“Pepper!” I yelled. “Pepper!”

I splashed through the water vigorously, trying to find Pepper. Finally, I found her, paddling towards shore. When I went over to her, I found that she had squid legs!

I screamed, “Mom! Dad!”

I trudged through the water, towards the shore. Pepper followed. When I showed my parents Pepper, they said, “What in the name of my existence!”

My parents and I had no idea what to do, so we just sat down to eat snack. When I went back, once again, Pepper’s legs were gone.

I stuttered, “Wha...why does it always disappear without a trace?!” I sighed, finally settling down. “Well, there.” I said, trudging back to the water to play.